Fort Worth Community and School District

Fort Worth, the most typically Texan of all Texan cities, began as a small outpost on a lonely frontier. Today, this metropolitan area of more than 600,000 people blends its cattle and oil heritage seamlessly with an ever-growing, diverse array of new businesses and industries. North Side High School is an urban school in Texas' fourth largest city. The student body is primarily Hispanic. A large percentage of the students are first generation high school graduates, and many have immigrated from other countries. North Side High School encompasses one of Fort Worth's oldest neighborhoods.
